going for MOT
Written by David at May 02, 2017 9:51 pm

Wonderful trip through the Cotswolds today, MOT time in Dorset

Then see what additional modern enhancement might be worth doing, also option of "repairs" to smarten her up

---

Re: going for MOT
Written by David at May 29, 2018 5:24 pm

Another year on, another MOT pass today. Car going very well, even the screen wash works

---

Re: going for MOT
Written by David at May 30, 2019 4:27 pm

Got its voluntary MOT last week. Hope to use the car more this year

---

Re: going for MOT
Written by Rich5ltr at May 30, 2019 9:52 pm

Well done David, must get mine tested. Tend to do it every 18 months or when I remember!

Re: going for MOT
Written by David at Aug 11, 2020 3:15 pm

Famous last words "must use it more". Started the car today for the first time in a year, gone to a local specialist for a new fuel pump and nose to tail checkover. MOT of course deferred till November

---

Re: going for MOT
Written by Rich5ltr at Aug 13, 2020 7:32 am

Out of interest, what were the modern enhancements you mentioned back in 2017? I'm considering LED side lights, indicators and brake lights. Anything else?

p.s. which car is it that you are testing?

Re: going for MOT
Written by David at Aug 13, 2020 8:34 am

Hi Rich, it's LR/117/R the ex works demonstrator and DB taxi. It's now fitted with modern brakes from Fosseway Engineering although we're replacing the green stuff pads as they're not very effective. The old fuel pump had basically gummed up so the replacement will be solid state, and the fuel tank solenoid is being rebuilt to get the reserve capacity to work for the first time! We're looking to get the car ready to go to Silverstone on Saturday 22 August for the Bentley DC race meeting if spectators are allowed

---

Re: going for MOT
Written by David at Sep 09, 2020 5:43 pm

Sadly the BDC was behind closed doors, and anyway the car was not ready. Got it back last Friday, really happy with the result but 60 hours of labour and £2k of parts were needed

---

Re: going for MOT

Lagondaforum: going for MOT

Written by David at Nov 27, 2020 1:28 pm

Got its deferred MOT yesterday, but now we find there's about an inch of water in the fuel tanks and supposedly clean petrol looks like orange juice with bits in. So tanks out, clean and refit, with a new balance pipe. Waste of about 6 gallons of optimax put in last Sunday

---

Re: going for MOT

Written by davidbracey at Nov 27, 2020 8:00 pm

Sorry to hear that, David. From where did the water come? Was it in the fuel?
