Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by DouglasWFox at Jul 20, 2018 2:35 pm

Can anyone help with a handle for a SkyHi jack?

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by bruce carey at Oct 22, 2018 2:53 pm

Before i have these made...Does anyone know where to acquire new brake & clutch pedal pads for a 38 ?

thanks

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by bill at Oct 24, 2018 5:49 pm

These are actually quite easy to make up if you have access to a small lathe. You just need to machine up the little end which inserts (by weld or braze) in the end of a piece of decent thick walled tube. Copy an original if you can get access to one. Doesn't take too long. Then leave it outside for a couple of months in the winter and it will soon look like an original one !

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by M70 at Oct 24, 2018 6:00 pm

I agree they are relatively easy to manufacture, the original handles I have are solid and the length varies depending on where they were fixed originally. I came back from an auto jumble about 15 years ago proudly bearing a SkyHi jack and handle only to find the handle was too short to slot into the clips along the bonnet hinge! The joy of our cars.

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by Colin M34 at Oct 25, 2018 7:13 pm

Hi Stephen,

Perhaps the handle was for a HC 2 Litre where the bonnet is shorter and so the clips are closer together.

Were the handles originally nickel plated?

Colin

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by Colin M34 at Oct 25, 2018 7:14 pm

Hi Stephen,

Perhaps the handle was for a HC 2 Litre where the bonnet is shorter and so the clips are closer together.

Were the handles originally nickel plated?

Colin

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by h14 at Oct 26, 2018 1:30 pm

Bruce,

Do you mean the pedal, which I think is cast bronze, or the rubbers for them? A pedal or maybe a pair were advertiserd on ebay a few months ago, at a daftly expensive start price, so I doubt they sold. Someone did make the rubbers many years ago (1980s), not aware of a supplier today.

Colin,
I think the SkyHi jack is a postwar Lagonda item. Perhaps they did make them for 2 Litres!

Laurence

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by M70 at Oct 26, 2018 4:21 pm

Quote by Colin M34:

Hi Stephen,

Perhaps the handle was for a HC 2 Litre where the bonnet is shorter and so the clips are closer together.

Were the handles originally nickel plated?

Colin

Colin, I hadn't thought about a 2-Litre. Certainly both mine are nickel plated although well worn now, but I like the patina.
Stephen

---

Re: Handle for SkyHi Jack
Written by Colin M34 at Oct 27, 2018 5:45 pm

By the way, "Stadium" relates to Wembley Stadium, co-located with the British Empire Exhibition which ran from April 1924 to 1925. The exhibition included several "palaces" of Engineering, Industry and Arts. These were major structures which then became industrial units.

Take a look at http://www.classic-british-car-jacks.uk

Cheers Colin

---