

Lagondaforum: Tool kits

Re: Tool kits

Written by bruffsup at Jan 03, 2013 6:59 pm

Please post pictures here if not too much bother as I am sure there are others including me who are interested in this subject.

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by h14 at Jan 03, 2013 7:22 pm

Will do if I can but my last attempt didn't work!

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by bruffsup at Jan 03, 2013 7:36 pm

PROBABLY TOO LARGE A FILE. IF USING A MAC just export the picture to documents and make sure you change it to jpg format when given the choice , then choose smallest quality and large size, this generally gives a good picture under 150 kb. I am still learning as well

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by bruffsup at Aug 04, 2013 2:01 pm

I just "discovered" this unfortunately empty tool roll that was amongst my M45 project. I initially thought it would be stashed under the rear floor boards but on second thought that would be a lot of weight hanging down so maybe behind the rear seat? Any ideas?

---

Attachments:

P1300524.JPG.jpg (filesize: 106.24 KB)

P1300525.JPG.jpg (filesize: 104.95 KB)

P1300526.JPG.jpg (filesize: 113.88 KB)

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by alistair at Aug 04, 2013 7:50 pm

Barry

on my M45 (which I have now sold so no pictures) this carpeted panel with the handle and small bolt was upright on the left hand side of the passenger footwell. So you could keep tools or mapbooks in a vertical compartment between this carpeted panel and the bodywork, to the depth of the wood frame of the car. hope that makes sense!

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by Colin M34 at Aug 04, 2013 10:07 pm

Hi Barry,

This was a standard feature on all Lagonda Tourers, along with a holster for the wheel spinner hammer on the offside.

Are you coming to Beaulieu this year?

Colin

---

Re: Tool kits

Written by bruffsup at Aug 05, 2013 3:03 am

Why is the obvious sometimes so elusive? Thank you gentlemen!

Lagondaforum: Tool kits

Colin, I certainly would like to go to Beaulieu No definite plans yet but finances may have taken a positive turn recently and that is what it hinges on !

---