As David says, what about the aperture in the rear parcel shelf?

The round hole is the intake for the Smiths heater.

The reaction of some of the motoring press to the AML auction, on C&SC today:

Headline: Aston Jet makes millions as Rapide stuns bidders

"Yet more surprising was the £147,100 paid for a Lagonda Rapide four-door saloon (one of only 55 built), which had been estimated to make just £60-80,000."

The standard of writing is unimpressive to say the least...

I have just browsed the AML Bonhams sale at NP.

Only one Rapide is for sale, I already knew the Oz car was not joining in the fun, but the mystery deepens, I didn't spot the Irish car either, perhaps it has sold privately ?

Anyway, LR129 has been put up for sale, with estimate of £60-80 k

Exciting! I have the original steering wheel from this car.

It will become a benchmark I suspect, in view of condition and work recently done by the vendor and over time by the previous owner

The Webasto may keep the hammer price down.

I think the Webasto is a great addition especially with the air deflector up, unruffled even in the back. Makes the interior very light

I think Webasto aside, Bonham's have done a lot with this particular car; a large number of photo's, long listing, interesting estimate etc; and they are no doubt hoping to get a very good price on the day.

I wonder why the vendor has kept this car for such a short time - I won't be letting go of mine so quickly.

Excuse me folks, but could anyone tell me what Webasto is and enlighten me on the pro's & con's?

This question may disclose a considerable ignorance on my part but there is only one way to solve this and that is simply ask the question.

Thanks in advance!
