LR128 for sale at Artcurial

Written by SRD at Jan 09, 2014 1:18 pm

Seemingly hot on the heels of LR133, another wonderful Rapide is coming up for sale on 7th February at Artcurial.

This one is LR128, one of the rare left hand drive cars, looks very good in what appears to be Goodwood Green paint; leatherwork interior looks to have been restored, originally fawn, and several carpets replaced.

The engine now running on 3 SU's and looks to have had a fair bit of work and money spent under the bonnet.

Estimate is Euros 140-220,000

I had forgotten to mention that aside from being LHD, this car is also an original manual, and possibly with the superior 5-speed ZF box.

I wonder if it worked any better than the DB5 or DB6, was never too impressed with this system in the late 1970's and early 1980's.

A bit low, though I note that many lots barely made it to the bottom of their estimate bracket (and some didn't even manage that).

Do you think LHD is a good or a bad thing value wise?

I have been told by several very well qualified trade sources - at least reference DB4/5/6 models - that LHD should attract a 10-20% premium. Of course, there are several thousand of those cars, as opposed to our tiny number. That may make a difference. Then again...
