

Lagondaforum: What are these?

What are these?

Written by randall977 at Jan 19, 2014 11:01 am

I have these four brackets left over - they are around 3/4" long, the exhaust hangers should give a sense of scale. They were with the front seat nuts and bolts but are too small to be part of the hinges. They look like they belong with the picnic tables? Anyone recognise them?

Many thanks

Re: What are these?

Written by David at Jan 19, 2014 1:08 pm

I don't recognise them as part of the picnic tables hinge mechanism. Something to do with front seat runners? E.g. end stops. Sorry no joy with that piece of door trim

Re: What are these?

Written by randall977 at Jan 19, 2014 6:56 pm

Thanks for looking. I decided to make the part in question today, much harder said than done but it turned out okay.

As for these brackets, I'll look around the runners but I wouldn't have thought they would be up to the job. The rear seat base seems quite loose, what holds it in place?

Re: What are these?

Written by David at Jan 21, 2014 8:42 am

Gravity! And alignment of frame and support, plus tucking the rear of the squab under the seat-back

Re: What are these?

Written by randall977 at Jan 21, 2014 11:08 am

It was quite annoying to see all my seat belt buckles disappear down the back because it moved forwards a bit. It does fit well but some kind of re-assuring clunk as it slots in would be nice.

Re: What are these?

Written by David at Jan 21, 2014 4:53 pm

For mine to move forward I have to slightly lift up the front of the seat...

Re: What are these?

Written by randall977 at Jan 27, 2014 9:08 pm

Thanks for the tip David, a bit of adjustment and it now sits in the right place! Still haven't found what those brackets are for...

Re: What are these?

Written by ray sherratt at Jan 27, 2014 10:01 pm

Do they hold the rear seat swab in place. By clipping the wires into them. But not knowing the make up of the swabs I'm only guessing. Great job on the restoration.

Ray.
