Lagondaforum: First pictures released of the new Lagonda

First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by TVJL at Jul 29, 2014 11:06 pm

http://jalopnik.com/the-aston-martin-lagonda-is-four-doors-of-middle-easter-1610557396?utm_campaign=socialflow_jalopnik_twitter&utm_source=jalopnik_twitter&utm_medium=socialflow

---

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by David at Jul 30, 2014 8:11 pm

We'll need a new V12 section on this forum...

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by TVJL at Aug 02, 2014 8:39 am

Indeed! I don't know what others think of the design. For myself, currently I'm just so thankful that it isn't an SUV.

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by David at Aug 02, 2014 12:34 pm

I think it looks quite elegant, except maybe the front. Now where have I heard that before?

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by davidbracey at Oct 02, 2014 6:28 pm

More pictures here http://www.leftlanenews.com/official-images-2015-aston-martin-lagonda-sedan.html
 I like the look of it and also the fact that it is the most luxurious car in the AML range. It seems befitting of the Lagonda name to me. I also really like the new Lagonda bonnet badge.

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by SRD at Oct 03, 2014 10:07 am

David - I am inclined to agree, but I do find the Rapide grows on you with time ...

Re: First pictures released of the new Lagonda
Written by davidbracey at Oct 03, 2014 11:06 am

I agree also. The Rapide is the most beautiful production car of any make in my opinion. However, I drove one when I was looking for a new 4 seater when they came out and it definitely isn't a family car. The passengers get thrown about like navigators in fighter planes. Which is why I bought the Maserati QP which also looks great and can be driven like an out of control firework or as a luxury taxi. I suspect the new AML Lagonda will be less of a firework but effortless to drive. How I wish... Guess I will have the Maser for some time yet.